📅 Published: 26 January 2019

Bridget Ferrill (<https://bridgetferal.bandcamp.com>) is a circuit designer / sound engineer / electronic musician. Her work plays between composition and noise, exploring augmented instruments, handmade electronics, and experimental computer music. Her most recent circuit is the Anglerfish drone synth for Koma Elektronik/Common Ground and her most recent album is String or Rope, released on NYC label Embalming Lately.

She studied multimedia & experimental music at Brown University, stuck around Rhode Island for a year-long residency at Providence's mythical feminist art space The Dirt Palace, and then resettled in Berlin, where she's lived for the last 2 years.

She currently tours with saxophonist Bendik Giske, performing live electronics.
