 Published: 02 February 2019

Luke Fraser is a London-based composer, performer, teacher and broadcaster working across the fields of generative electronic music, experimental electro, and multimedia performance and theatre.

Current areas of interest include complexity arising from polyrhythm and polymetre, and emergence within electronic textures.

More generally he has an ongoing interest in exploring the role of both politics and humour within contemporary music and performance.

Recent work has been commissioned, performed and exhibited at The Roundhouse in London, Bloomberg New Contemporaries in London and Gateshead, and at the ICA, London.
