 Published: 12 November 2022

San Francisco-born, Berlin-based artist Chloe Lula has been involved with electronic music for more than a decade, helming record labels and throwing parties for years before beginning to DJ. She's become known for atmospheric sets that dig deep into the recesses of electro, industrial, and techno, and has played at Berghain, Tresor, Reaktor, Movement weekend in Detroit, and countless clubs, festivals, and parties across Europe and North America.

She started producing her first live sets in 2019, when she completed an artist residency with Drew McDowall of Coil.

The experience ignited her confidence in composition and allowed her to combine her classical cello training with electronics, melding granular synthesis with acoustic riffs and metallic percussion to create an alloyed brand of droned-out industrial electronica.

Many of these jams ended up becoming the tracks on her debut EP with aufnahme + wiedergabe in 2021. Her second EP will be released on Tresor in June 2023, where she is also a resident DJ.

In addition to her career in music, she is also a broadcast journalist with Resident Advisor and a selector for her monthly post-punk show, 'No Exit,' on Refuge Worldwide Radio.
