 Published: 10 December 2022

Carlos Giffoni is a Venezuelan experimental musician and writer currently residing in Los Angeles. His transnational avant-garde music summit No Fun Fest and his celebrated New York record label No Fun Productions vitally propelled the trajectory and strengthened the cultural camaraderie of noise and improvised music worldwide.

The Venezuelan artist's solo and collaborative work with Merzbow, Thurston Moore, Lee Ranaldo, Nels Cline, Jim O'Rourke, Zeena Parkins, and Prurient, among many others, earned him a reputation as one of experimental music's most-known contemporary performers.

Carlos currently works with modular synthesizers, computer software, and found physical objects to create expressive abstract sonic landscapes.
