Mads Kinnerup (<https://www.instagram.com/madskinnerup/>) is a Danish artist, musician and music producer. With a background in electronic experimental music and IDM, he is interested in pushing the boundaries of how music can be performed and produced in new and original ways.

Kinnerup's music is performed live using modular synthesizer systems and self-developed software systems, creating music that is minimal, simple and repetitive in terms of melody, yet complex in timbre.

His self-released debut album Parademons from 2019 features Warp-ish style ambient universes and vintage drum machine sounds. His second album Heart 1993 from 2022 released on the Danish label Janushoved is an atmospheric instrumental release playing with memories of childhood sounds, mangled and deconstructed. On his third album Interpolation from December 2022, Kinnerup presents new rhythm based IDM music. The seventh track of the record, Stream, is co-written with electronic star Caterina Barbieri.

As a music producer Kinnerup has worked with influential names on the Danish independent and electronic scene such as Spleen United, Greta and We Are The Way For The Cosmos To Know Itself.
