📅 Published: 26 September 2014

Annelie Nederberg (<http://www.annelienederberg.com>) is a composer and performer from Sweden currently based in the UK, pursuing an AHRC funded PhD in Musical Composition at University of Surrey. Annelie has a passion for the performing arts and composes for contemporary dance, theatre and film as well as acousmatic music.

She also performs with her self-developed gestural feedback instrument and other electronic sounds. Her works move freely between concrete and abstract sounds, between music and sound art, with the human body as an important component; a confluence between movement and electronics into poetic and often slowly evolving sonorous shapes. Annelie's music has been represented at ICMC, at festivals in the UK and internationally, on radio in Europe and the USA, and in concerts internationally. She has been awarded numerous scholarships and stipends and is a member of the Swedish Society of Composers and SEAMS, the Swedish Electroacoustic Music Society.
